FAMILY RECORD

My Own Family--Ancestry, etc., On My Father's Side

By Dennison Alcott

From the most authentic accounts I can gather, my ancestors emigrated from England in the early settlement of the United States. Two or three brothers pitched their tent where now is located the city of New Haven in the state of Connecticut, and were identified with its earliest history. From one of these our family sprang. One of the name emigrated north from New or North Haven about twenty miles and settled in the town of Farmington, now Wolcott, in the county of New Haven, Connecticut, and from him I am descended and in this town I was born.

The emigrant brothers from England spelled the name "Alcock", and as it appears, in after time it was spelled "Allox", and sometimes and generally in more modern times "Alcox"; but now almost universally it is spelled Alcott, a few exceptions amongst the more aged of the family here and there having a tenacity for the antique.

My ancestors were not marked for intellectual powers, but were somewhat noted for honesty and sincerity. A sentimental race, some pious and devoted Christians, they mostly embraced the faith of the Congregational church, but in modern times many of them have become Episcopalians and a few Universalists, and now and then one has embraced the Baptist views. I have heard of one Baptist Deacon and one Baptist preacher.

In the year of our Lord 1851, September 19, I was in the city of New Haven and I visited the cemetery of the city and on the north side of that City of the Dead I found some three hundred monuments of ancient dates and of various forms and sizes and sculpture and of different kinds of stone, but all wearing the appearance of great antiquity. These monumental stones I am informed once marked the spot where lay the bodies whose names they bear who were buried on what is called the "Green" where now stand the houses of worship of several denominations and the State House and lofty trees. Underneath sleep the ashes of the dead and hundreds pass over them daily--no stone marks the place of their sleeping except some two or three amongst them, the monuments of the three renegades.

Amongst this group of monuments I found one bearing this inscription (for they are all grouped together in several extended ranks in alphabetical order)--see inscription below.

Alcock as a surname was established by the King of England in 1616 by granting a coat of arms. On the Alcock Shield is "Peace", emblematic of military truce, three heads of cocks, emblematic of watchfulness. Ancestor in England, John Alcock born at Beverly, Yorkshire, England, was Bishop of Rochester, Worcester and W. He founded Jesus College, Cambridge, son of piety and learning. Died October 1, 1690.

Grave Stones in New Haven Cemetery

"Thomas Alcock. Died April 2, 1757. Aged 80 years"

Thomas Alcock was the son of Philip, brother of John, my great-great-great-grandfather. He was born in 1677. (I presume that in the graveyard in North Haven might be found monuments with inscriptions of the same. I did not visit that place)

One Thomas Alcock from England with Winthrop in 1630. Died in Boston, September 14, 1657. His son Philip born in 1648--his son John born July 14, 1675, died March, 1722, aged 47 years--his son John born January, 1703, married to Deborah Blakeslee January 14, 1729 or 30 by Rev. Isaac Stiles of North Haven. Settled in Wolcott in 1761. He was my great-grandfather.

The following inscriptions copied from gravestones in the graveyard on Wolcott Hill, New Haven County, Connecticut in September, 1851 by D. Alcott.

"John Alcox, Died January 6, 1777, Aged 71 Years and Wife
Deborah Alcox, Died January 7, 1789, Aged 77 Years"

(Deborah Blakeslee Alcox, daughter of Isaac Blakeslee of North Haven) The above my great-grandfather and great-grandmother.

My grandfather and grandmother

"David Alcox, Died January 29, 1821, aged 61 Years"
"Abigail Johnson Alcox, Died February 23, 1793, aged 53 Years"

My father's oldest sister (maiden lady)

"Mary Alcott, Died May 5, 1830, aged 62 Years"

My father's 2nd brother

"Obed Alcott, Died August 6, 1847, aged 71 Years"

My father's third and twin brother

"Eldad Alcott, Died June 4, 1850, aged 71 Years"

My father's oldest brother, Obed's, oldest daughter

"Levina Alcott Knowles, Died March 1, 1821, aged 30 Years"

She married Knowles of Haddam February 6, 1800.

My father's cousin, son of John, my grandfather's brother, born
June 24, 1764

"John Bronson Alcox, Died September 27, 1836, aged 77 Years"

- - - - -

My father's cousin, son of John, my grandfather's brother

"Samuel Alcott, Born November 29, 1761, Died 1810"

The following inscriptions copied by me from monuments in the cemetery on Wolcott Hill, New Haven County, Connecticut, September, 1851.
Not relatives as I know of.

"Ezra Hall, Died August 29, 1769, aged 49 Years"

- - - - -

"John Bronson, Died November 10, 1808, aged 100 Years, 3 months and 25 Days"

The following inscriptions copied September, 1851 from monuments in graveyard East Wolcott, New Haven County, Connecticut by myself. Relatives.

A brother of David, my grandfather.

"Jesse Alcott, Died October 29, 1809, aged 74 Years"

- - - - -

A son of the above Jesse, my grandfather's brother.

"Joel Alcott, Died May 27, 1810, aged 32"

This cemetery is in the east part of Wolcott township; in this neighborhood lives my oldest sister Rosetta Churchill. In this resting place of the dead lies her oldest daughter Evelina. She died in the bloom of life and while a member of the Lewis Academy in Southington, Conn. Her prospects were bright and brightening. She was 16 years, 5 months, and 16 days old.
"O Death, thou enemy of our race". (See Page 19)

The following inscriptions were copied by me from monuments in East Wolcott burial ground in September, 1851, New Haven County, Conn. Not relatives.

"Zur Brockett, Died September 17, 1834, aged 61 Years"

- - - - -

"Asahel Brocket. Was Drowned at East Haven June 2, 1814, aged 35 Years"

"Amice Brockett, Died March 11, 1833, aged 81 Years"

"Sarah Brockett, Wife of Titus Brockett, Died April 23, 1830"

Oldest inscription in East Wolcott graveyard, 1800. Now there are many graves there. September, 1851. D. Alcott Inscriptions copied from monuments in the burying ground on Plymouth Hill, Litchfield County, Connecticut, September, 1851. My ancestors on my mother's side. D. Alcott.

Mother's father and mother

"Captain Amos Bronson, Died September 2, 1819, aged 88 Years"

(Note--my mother says he was two years older than the grave stone indicated)

His wife----- (See Page 25)

"Amos Blacklee Bronson, Died December 3, 1800, aged 68 Years"

(See Page 25)

"Emilia Bronson, Died November 14, 1800, aged 2 Years"

See Page 28. Daughter of Noah M. Bronson, a brother of my mother. My mother says Emilia was with her parents at her father's a short time previous to her death and as she left she put her arms around her grandma's neck and said to her, "Grandma, I shall never see you again", which proved true. Emilia died November 14 and grandma December 3 following. "Death cuts down all both great and small". D. Alcott

Inscriptions copied from monuments in Cheshire, New Haven County, Connecticut, in September 1851. D. Alcott.

My mother's brother, the son of Captain Amos Bronson, Rev. Tillotson Bronson, D.D., born in 1751.

"Tillotson Bronson, Died at Cheshire September 6, 1826, aged 65 Years"

He was an Episcopal minister.

He graduated at Yale College in 1786, ordained deacon the same year by Bishop Leary, aged 31. He was a sound scholar and a thorough scholar and held with acceptance for twenty years the office of Principal of the Connecticut Episcopal Academy.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord"

- - - - -

"Polly Hotchkiss, Second Wife of Rev. Tillotson Bronson, D.D., Died September 28, 1826, aged 57 Years"

- - - - -

Sylvia Bronson Alcott, my mother, told me last summer that John Bronson, her great-grandfather married Comfort Baldwin.

Also, that my great grandfather, John Bronson, Jr., died in New York, County of Dutchess, and town of Amenia, in the village of Hartness.

Again, if I wish more definite intelligence write to the postmaster, inquire for John or William Barker, cousins of hers, children of her father's sister.

Also, that one John Barker, not married, was killed by the fall of a tree.

Mother says again, that her grandfather, John Bronson, Jr., died on the day that the 2nd man that was hanged in the state was executed at Litchfield, Conn.

D. Alcott.

Plymouth Hill Burial Place

"Nicy Baldwin, Died July 2, 1807, aged 21 Years"

Daughter of Thadous and Thankful Alcox Baldwin, my paternal great aunt, a sister of my grandfather, David Alcott. I remember distinctly of my great-aunt Thankful leading me into the room where lay the corpse of this young lady and how frightened I was, it being the first dead person I recollect of ever seeing. I was then five and a half years old.

(I recollect of seeing Mr. John Alcott of Wolcott put into the coffin. I think I was then about 7 years old. He was my grandfather's brother)

Note. In the month of September, 1851 when on a visit to my native state, Connecticut, I went with my mother and sister Rosetta and her son Newell B. Churchill and sister Julia's daughter Lucelia Merrill and my wife, to the house in Plymouth where used to live my great-uncle Shadous Baldwin, where now lives David, their youngest son with his maiden sister Lydia Baldwin, aged 71, and his daughter Laura, unmarried, aged 30--his wife being dead this many years. His age at this time 59. A good visit, somewhat religious.

Denison Alcott.

Eliza Guthrie Tuttle, wife of Eld. Elioda Tuttle, died in May 16, 1841, aged 29 years, 9 months, and 8 days.

FAMILY RECORD -- ALCOTT FAMILY

Here follows a record of my family, their births, marriages, deaths so far as I have any knowledge gathered from the best sources of information at my command, as well those who succeeded me as those who are contemporaneous with me and have come on to the stage since I have, with remarks concerning them such as may be of some interest to those who may come after me and live when I shall lie beneath the ground. I hope my successors will continue this Record on to remote generations. I would enjoin it upon my children and children's children through coming time. D. Alcott.

Clinton village, Kirkland town, Oneida County, New York, March 15, 1852.

Note. I refer the reader to the first page of this book for some remarks concerning my ancestors, which see for I need not repeat them here. I begin with the relatives on my father's side bearing my name. The note above directs to an explanation of the different spelling of the name.

Denison Alcott's Family

"Thomas Alcock, Died April 2, 1757, aged 80 Years"

The above found on a grave stone in the graveyard of New Haven, Conn., on a gravestone among a group of stones placed together in alphabetical order on the north side of said yard, taken from where now is the Green, where lie the ashes of said Thomas Alcock. David Alcox

My grandfather son of John 2nd, he son of John 1st, he son of Philip, he son of Thomas, from England in 1630. His ancestor John Alcock, born in Yorkshire, England, and a Bishop in time of Henry VII. He died October 1, 1500

David Alcox, born in Wolcott, New Haven County, Connecticut, January 12, 1740, son of John and Deborah Flakeloe Alcox.
Married Miss Abigail Johnson July 2, 1767
Second marriage Widow Sarah Platt, Feb. 5, 1795
David, died Jan. 29, 1821, aged 81 years
Abigail, died Feb. 25, 1793, aged 53 years
2nd wife, Sarah Platt, died

Note. David was the fifth son and sixth child of John Alcox 2nd (see page 2 & 14) He was born in Wolcott and there he lived and there he died and in the cemetery on Wolcott Hill he lies buried. He was a farmer.

He never united with the church, but prayed in his family regularly for many years before his death, he was an honest and upright man. He was a constant attendant at the house of God, in sentiment a Congregationalist as were his fathers.

When I was quite young and I lived in the family of my grandfather he was very punctual in his family devotions. For many years previous to his death he was much afflicted with the rheumatism, so much that his hips were drawn out of shape and he was bowed down. From the time I recollect of seeing him first, he always walked with a cane and sometimes two. Hence he performed very little labor for many years. Yet he was cheerful and loved the society of his kindred and friends. He had by industry and frugality and economy secured a competence for himself and family, and at his death left quite a property. He was rather of the two inclined to parsimony if not to covetousness.

Abigail Johnson Alcott, my grandmother died in Wolcott. She lies in the burying ground on Wolcott Hill beside my grandfather. I never saw her. She died eight years, eight months, and sixteen days prior to my birth. Of her I can say nothing. I do not remember of ever hearing anything said of her character. My father was in his fourteenth year when his mother died.

Yet he was cheerful and loved the society of his kindred and friends. He had by industry and frugality and economy secured a competence for himself and family, and at his death left quite a property. He was rather of the two inclined to parsimony if not to secretiveness.

Abigail Johnson Alcott, my grandmother died in Wolcott. She lies in the burying ground on Wolcott Hill beside my grandfather. I never saw her. She died eight years, eight months, and sixteen days prior to my birth. Of her I can say nothing. I do not remember of ever hearing anything said of her character. My father was in his fourteenth year when his mother died.

Widow Sarah Platt, my grandfather's second wife. They were married February 5, 1795. Her maiden name was I think she had had two husbands before, the name of the first the name of the second. She was never very much loved and respected in the family, a very working venurious sort of a woman and not always as honest as she ought to be, as some of my uncles tho't, at any rate she took good care of many a silver dollar of my grandfather's. As I have said before I lived in the family and had an opportunity to learn something of her traits of character in some things, as most boys do. I then liked to visit the pantry for a lunch, but everything edible or drinkable of the older kind (for this was before the temperance reform) was well secured with lock and key. Her tongue was freely used upon me for my mistakes and boyish pranks. I did not love her. After my grandfather's death, she married Zealous Blakeloe and lived in Wolcott.

David, my grandfather, had by his first wife Abigail eight children, four sons and four daughters (See page 8)

1. Ann, his first-born. Born Sept. 16, 1769 in Wolcott. She was never married, always lived with her father and survived him about nine years. She died May 5, 1830, aged 62 years, in Wolcott, Conn. and lies buried in the cemetery Wolcott Hill with many of her kindred.

2. Abigail, born in Wolcott Dec. 14, 1770, and married Asahel Lane August 26, 1793. Names of children--Hiram

3. David, born in Wolcott April 16, 1774, married Anna Fenn of Plymouth, Litchfield Co. Conn. February 23, 1803. Names of their children--Eli, born in Wolcott April 21, 1810, now dead; Irene, Philena, born Oct. 4, 1817 in Wolcott. Fenn born in Wolcott Feb. 3, 1804, now dead.

David is dead, he was a farmer.

4. Obed, born in Wolcott Sept. 8, 1776. Married Anna Anclous July 13, 1797. Names of children--William, a doctor. Spent some time in Boston, now lives at Newton in Massachusetts, and for many years an author--the author of nearly 100 books. Married a Miss Bronson, has two or three children and is strictly a vegetarian; eats no meat and has tried many experiments on himself, for instance, he took nothing liquid into his mouth for one year, etc. I saw him last fall, he was nothing but a shadow. Obed, farmer, died Aug. 6, 1847, 71 Yrs Levina, married Knowles. Died March 1, 1821 in Wolcott, buried in Wolcott, aged 30 years.

Floriana, born in Wolcott. Never married, living with her mother. Died in Wolcott.

Gary, married Miss Harriet Nichols. He lives in Wolcott, has five children--Levina, Edwin, Antinett, Anna, Elzer. Gary was drowned in Illinois.

5. Eldad, a twin brother of Medad, born in Wolcott Sept. 14, 1779, and died in Wolcott June 4, 1850, aged 71. Married Widow Sibbil Bartholomew Jan. 29, 1817. Children--Flynn, Sarah Ann, born Jan. 9, 1818. She married Sherman Moulton, has several children. Eldad lived and died on the homestead of his father, which was the homestead of his father, my great-grandfather, where now live his widow and daughter Sarah Ann. He was a farmer. Sibbil B. Alcott, wife of Eldad, died September 25, 1875, aged 67 years.

6. Medad (a twin brother of Eldad) my father, born in Wolcott Sep. 14, 1779 and died in Waterbury, New Haven Co., Conn., January 15, 1829, aged 49 years, 3 months, and 29 days, buried in Waterbury Cemetery. A plain stone marks the place of his interment.

Married Silvia Bronson, daughter of Capt. Amos Bronson of Plymouth Litchfield Co., 1801. Children--Denison, Rosetta (dead), Johnson (dead), Julia Annor, Addison, Sylvia Ann (died young), Lucy Maria. For particulars see page 17-21. My father was a shoemaker.

BRONSON FAMILY

It appears from Amos B. Alcott's researches and examinations of records that our family were first found in Hartford, Conn. in 1636. A man by the name of Richard Bronson and another by the name of John, supposed to be the son of Richard. John came to Hartford in 1636 and was living there in 1639, went to Farmington in 1641 and died there in 1680. Isaac, his son, to Waterbury from whom we are descended in direct line. According to this it would stand thus in genealogy.

Richard, living in Hartford in 1639
John, " moved to Farmington in 1641, died 1680
Isaac, born in Farmington, went to Waterbury, born 1645
John Sr., born 1673
John Jr., born Waterbury 1701
Amos Sr. born 1731
Sylvia (married Alcott) born Plymouth, Conn., 1776
Denison Alcott, born Wolcott, 1801
Maria Alcott, Sullivan, Mad. Co., N. Y. 1827

Chloe Bronson, youngest daughter of John Jr. Bronson married Col. Wm. Barker, Nine Partners, N. Y.

The Bronson family married into the following families and are hence connected with them by blood--Root, Nicknack, Baldwin, Blakslee.

Note. I have been informed by my cousin Isaac Bronson of Medina, Ohio, that our branch of the Bronson family settled at first in Stratford, Fairfield Co. Conn., that the records of that town show this (so said Uncle Tillotson, his father) and that they emigrated from Ireland.

My grandfather Capt. Amos Bronson married Anner Blakslee. Uncle Noah says my grandmother's father's name was Jacob Blakslee and that his father's name was Ebenezer. See page

Being at Uncle Noah's in Feb. 1854, he showed me a paper that cousin A. B. Alcott left him containing the following, or this is an abstract--

The emigrating ancestor whose name was Richard Bronson lived in Hartford, Conn. in 1639, came there in 1636. His son John lived there also and his son Isaac born in 1645. His son John born 1673. His son John born in 1701. His son Amos, my grandfather born 1731. John the first went to Farmington 1641 and died in Farmington 1680. Isaac to Waterbury to form a settlement there. Medina, Feb. 27, 1854, D. Alcott.

Relatives on the side of my mother. Bronson Family

The Bronsons from whom I am descended were from men of the name who settled in New or North Haven, Conn. early in its history. I believe they came from England or Wales, but I do not know positively, having no means of ascertaining as to that.

John Bronson (as this was the orthography of the name in early time) settled a few miles north from the place afore mentioned, as I suppose from the fact that I find in the genealogy of the Poote family mention made of three men of the name of Poote forming a connexion in marriage with three of John Bronson Jr.'s daughters who then resided in Waterbury, New Haven Co., Conn. and I infer that there must have been a John Sr. somewhere in those parts; and these three sisters were sisters of my mother's father, Amos Bronson. (Note, I find the name spelled differently, Brownson, Brumson, and Bronson, which latter is the now common way of spelling it)

I learn that, as my mother says, that John Bronson, her grandfather, took up a tract of land one mile square in the town of Plymouth, Litchfield Co., Connecticut, when it was a wilderness, and I have heard my Uncle Noah Bronson tell of his father, Amos Bronson's, being on this place with his father plowing etc. on the tract where my grandfather settled and lived and died.

My mother says her grandfather, John Jr. went to Armenia Co. of Dutchess, N. Y. to live and died in that county and state in Nine Partners. For further information see page 5.

Mother says again, that her great-grandfather John Sr. married Comfort Baldwin and the genealogy of the Foot family says he married Comfort Baldwin of Cheshire.

As before stated, Capt. Amos Bronson settled on the tract of land that his father took up. A portion of this was owned by him, on which he commended in early life and always lived and died. It appears that he came in possession of the homestead of his father, and on the old farm of her father my mother showed me last fall remains of the cellar where stood her grandfather, John Jr.'s house, but nearly all traces of where stood her father's house are obliterated--the tooth of time has devoured them.

My grandfather's old farm lies in a narrow valley, or rather hollow, with an outlet on the northwest and southwest and northeast. It lies enclosed between the hills and rocks. On the north and west the Jerico rocks, forming the southern boundary of Jericho Mountain, lifts its awful form, on the east Mount Toby, and on the west and south Bacon Hill, rather grand the view. The Housatonic River passes thru this valley and separates the farm, leaving a portion on the west and a portion on the east. It appears rather dismal to one who has spent his life on a plain. Some very good land, however. Here in this place and on this farm I lived when quite a small boy and some of my earliest recollections are of scenes that transpired in this valley. Yes, nearly the first, when my father removed to this place. I remember when the old barn now standing on this farm was raised. And in this river I caught my first fish and often after took them.

I said there was a passage out at the northwest, but hardly so. The river had made its way thru but only space for itself to pass. But in process of time a turnpike was made and opened from Winchester to Waterbury passing down this river and thru Bronsonvale, and by blasting the rocks and laying up a wall confining the river to more narrow limits, a passage for teams, a turnpike, was made. The old passage was at the northeast pass up Great Brook, or Sawmill Brook, to Plymouth Hill and around Church Hollow. Bronsonvale was situated in the southern part of Plymouth township. Here I lived, nor dreamed of a larger, or better place.

In the month of September, 1851, I passed over these fields and took a view of the old orchard and roads, but O, how changed, how different they appeared to me in my earliest childhood! The rocks were there, but as I gazed upon their towering heights, their lofty summits, their dingy and old appearance, I felt somewhat gloomy, and thought life was a dream.

But one thing more--Among the grand and the useful inventions of the day the railroad claims attention. The enterprising spirit of the age had contemplated and actually completed a railroad thru the valley of the Naugatuc and the Steam Horse was actually propelling the huge car along the track with its hundred passengers and the locomotives with their freight cars passing almost hourly. This work of art also passed thru the center of my grandfather's farm in Bronsonvale.

I did a moment pause and say, "What would my old grandsire say if he were to rise from his grave and occupy a moment on an eminence where I stood that overlooked this road." He would say, "Oh, how changed", and return to his bed of dust.

Indeed I passed twice over this part of the road in a car for the purpose of viewing this wonderful work. At the northwestern pass, to make way for the railway, the old turnpike (which was there when I was born) had by the use of gunpowder been driven farther upon Jericho's Mount, or rather the mount has been lessened by the work of art and the old Naugatuc had been confined to a narrower passage to make way for the railway which also found a passage.

Will the time come that vehicles will fly in the air?

Note. It is said by Mother that on account of different opinions on religion existing between my grandfather and his father, they separated the one from the other, the old gentlemen saying if one church could not contain them both, one house could not and so the old man left. Uncle Noah says my grandfather's father was a Baptist when he died. In early life my grandfather was a Congregationalist. In after life he became an Episcopalian, and died such. He was a Whig.

May Alcott, born in Concord, Mass., July 26, 1840. Married Ernest Nieriker, son of a Swiss banker. They were married in Paris, France. She died in Paris in 1880.

Clippings

"Mrs. Bronson Alcott, wife of A. Bronson Alcott and the mother of Miss Louisa, charming teller of stories, died at Concord, Sunday evening, aged 77. The daughter of Col Joseph May of Boston, she was married in 1860, and has impressed the energy and sweetness of character upon the world thru her family. Her funeral occurs this week Wednesday, and the bereaved family will have the sincere sympathy of many friends in this region and wherever Miss "Quincy's" books are read, and that is thruout the civilized world. Besides the beloved author, Mrs. Pratt, the mother of "Little Men" and Miss May, now pursuing her art abroad, mourn a mother's loss".

"Death of a Character in Little Women

"May Alcott, youngest daughter of Bronson Alcott, and sister of Louisa M. Alcott, died in Paris on Tuesday last, aged near 40. She is best known to the public by being one of the characters in Louisa Alcott's 'Little Women'. Two or three years ago she went abroad to study painting, having first studied under the late William M. Hunt. Last year she met in England Ernest Nieriker, son of a Swiss banker, and married him soon after, an event wholly unexpected by her friends. She had painted in this year's Paris Salons, and has resided in Paris lately."

"Little Women.

Mrs. May Alcott Nieriker

"Last week we quoted some suggestions made by Mrs. May Alcott Nieriker in her little book entitled 'Studying Art Abroad'. By almost the next mail we received tidings of her death. The following editorial in Woman's Journal will be of interest to the many readers of 'Little Women', and to those who will deeply sympathize with the gentle philosopher of Concord and with Louisa Alcott in this sorrow that has come to their hearts and home:

"The news of the death of Mr. May Alcott Nieriker saddened the New Year's festivities and throws a cloud of grief over a large circle of friends. We will not speak of the deep and sacred sorrow of her own family. A very large circle of those who never saw her felt a tender feeling toward the youngest of the Little Women. The Amy of the story, if not a literal portrait possessed many of the graceful and winning traits which endeared Mrs. Nieriker to her circle of friends. A pure transparent simplicity, a youthful freshness of feeling, genuine interest in the progress of others, earnest striving after excellence herself with a sweet willingness to be taught--and to accept criticism however severe, only as a help to correct her errors and improve in her art--were the traits which came most prominently to our mind in thinking of her now. She was always a lover of art, but soon gave up the pursuit of music, and devoted herself wholly to drawing. Mrs. Murdock's lessons and Dr. Rimmer's instructions gave her her first training, and she gained needed self-knowledge as a teacher. She was very successful with her pupils. When thru the liberality of her distinguished sister she could fulfill the desire of her heart in going to Europe, she devoted herself to study, and her progress was rapid. Her copies from Turner received high praise and a ready sale, and she had the sweet satisfaction of supporting herself without longer taxing her generous sister.

"The unselfish mother so well portrayed in the Mrs. March of 'Little Women' felt the separation from her youngest pit, but, like a true English woman, she refused to call her home, saying: 'No, May is getting what she needs, and I am happier to know that than to have her with me, feeling that she is not improving in her art."

"It was a deep grief to the daughter to be absent from the home circle when that mother passed away, and it was tender sympathy in that sorrow which first brought out the love which united her to Mr. Merikur. It was most consoling to know that her married life was thoroly happy, and that her husband's mother and sister were with her during her illness, giving her all the care and tenderness which her friends could ask for her.

"Yet we must mourn when a life so pure, true, and loving is cut off midway, and the wife, mother, daughter, sister is no more. Mourn not without gratitude for her life, not without hope for the future, but with aching hearts now.

"But her life is not in vain; thousands will turn again to the sweet story of her girlhood, and learn new lessons from it. Her last work was to complete a little book of advice to young artists, who, like herself, wished to study abroad with narrow pecuniary means. It will have a special interest now.

E.D. C. "

BLAKSLEE FAMILY

My wife's relatives. D. Alcott.

Note. I was on a visit at Medina, Ohio, in December, 1852, when Uncle Noah M. Bronson related to me the following:

There is in the possession of men in Wallingford, Connecticut, the anvil and the vice that were brought from England by two Blakslee's in the early settlement of Boston. They commenced business in Boston as blacksmiths but soon removed to New Haven, Conn., not liking Boston, and that the land on which Boston is built, a portion of it is in litigation in the Courts--the Blakslees being the plaintiffs in the case. Rome, Oneida Co., N. Y. Jan. 4/53
D. Alcott.

The Blakslees sprang from one or more of the name who emigrated from North Haven in early times and settled in the valley of the Naugatuc in the north part of the town of Plymouth, which in after times took the name of Church Hollow from the fact that first Episcopal edifice for worship in this town was erected here.

The Blakslees originally were Congregationalists, but many of them and nearly all embraced the views of the Episcopal church, or as it then was at that early day the Church of England, and were and have been to this day numbered among the strongest and most firm adherents and faithful defenders of that faith.

From these my wife is descended and myself in the line of my grandmother on my mother's side. I suppose they were descended from a stock emigration from England. The monuments in the graveyard in that place bear inscription of the name, very many of them. (See pages 25, 3 and 6)

Relatives of Emily Plaksee on her mother's side

I know nothing of the ancestry of this Smith family farther back than the grandparents of my wife. Her grandfather I never saw, the grandmother I have seen frequently. They are both buried in the cemetery in Northfield, Conn. (See page 6)

Whether they are descendants directly from the famous Capt. John Smith who commenced a settlement in Virginia, I cannot tell. They may be. There are so many of the name of almost every nation it would be a difficult matter to have their lineage all of them to him or even to suppose they were related to him.

Settlement of Waterbury, Connecticut

Inhabitants of Farmington petitioned the Assembly in 1673 for a grant of land in Mattatuck for a settlement (now Waterbury) Mattatuck the Indian name.

A committee appointed reported that it would sustain thirty families, this in 1674.

Articles of Agreement, May 30, 1674.

1. 6 Acres of land for home lot
2. Not exceed of Meadow worth 100 pounds
3. Taxes
4. Within four years "build a good and fashionable dwelling house 18' by 16', 9' between joints with a good chimney"

Among the members of this settlement were the names of John Bronson Sr., Abraham Bronson, Isaac Bronson; Bought of Indians a tract 10 miles long north and south and 6 miles wide east and west, bounded east by Farmington; south by Paugusset now Derby; west on Paugusset, Panerag and Potatunk, now Woodbury and Southbury; and north by wilderness.

Philips War, 1675

Settled 1677. 18 miles north and south, 10 miles east and west, now Waterbury, Watertown, Plymouth, half of Wolcott and a small part of Oxford and Prospect. Now contains 12000 persons, 30 families at first it would support.

First English child born in Waterbury Rebecca Richardson, daughter of Thomas and Mary Richardson, April 27, 1679, in a house that stood upon the site of the old Judd House. First male born, Richard, son of John and Mary Walton, September 27, 1679.

Salary of first minister 60 lbs--50 lbs in provisions and 10 lbs in wood. Wheat at 5 shillings, rye 3 shillings, corn 2/6, pork 5 pence lb. First minister, Jeremiah Peck Sr; second, John Jones; third, John Lead; fourth, John Southmoyd.

"Voted to set up a school four months or more, and the committee are to endeavor to get a school master to teach writing as well as reading"

Wolcott

Incorporated 1796 from Farmington & Waterbury, formerly called Farmingbury. First minister Alexander Gillett; second, Israel B. Woodward; Compared Connecticut to land of Canaan, especially Wolcott for it being rolling.

D. Wolcott.

Anecdote of Uncle Noah Miles Bronson

Related to us by a Mr. Dean, an Englishman, at the house of Cousin Hiram Bronson, son of Noah Miles, in Medina, Ohio, December 27, 1852, in the evening at the supper table in the presence of Cousin Hiram.

Two neighbors of Judge Bronson by the names of Blakslee and Warner had been for a long time at variance in consequence of a certain mill pond. It had involved their families in the quarrel and the matter had become a serious affair.

Blakslee had sold Warner a mill with the privilege of flowing a portion of adjoining land. Blakslee thought Warner flowed too much land, Warner thought not. Piercer and fiercer became the contest.

Judge Bronson devised a plan to reconcile the matter. He got them together but all in vain—it was no go. At length he asked Blakslee to step aside with him. He did so. He asked him to place a stone in the rocks in the ravine at the point where he supposed Warner had a right to raise the water into the ravine. He did so and then retired. He then took Warner into the ravine and desired him to put a stone in the ledge of rocks where he supposed he might raise the water. Without any knowledge of what the other had done, he placed his mark. And when the parties came together to look upon the marks, Lo and Behold! Warner had made his mark one foot below Blakslee's. This had the desired effect. They saw their former folly and were made friends.

The above mill is in Bagdad, Medina Co., Ohio.

Rome, Oneida Co., N. Y., January 4, 1853. D. Alcott.

THE CHAIN

Uncle Noah when a boy was with his grandfather on the farm, then now, which my grandfather afterward owned, driving a team for him. They then used oxen and one horse to plow. For chains they used green hide and without withes, but they kept breaking.

Finally Noah was left with the team and the old gentleman went to Farmington fifteen miles to get an iron chain, went on foot. He obtained one and then gave a charge to keep it in the family.

Noah had the chain and he used it on the road to going and mending turnpikes. He intended to leave it to his son, but someone stole it and it has been lost. It is supposed that Jacob Welton hooked the chain. He is the son of Eben Welton of Medina, Ohio.
